ABOUT THE YACHT

A capable Oceanis, set up to go.

Ikaroa is a Beneteau Oceanis 381, one of Bruce Farr's well-regarded early-90s cruising designs — a moderate-displacement monohull with a comfortable motion at sea and genuinely spacious accommodation for her length. She's currently moored at Changi Sailing Club and has been kept in regular sailing condition.

Below decks she offers a bright, teak-trimmed saloon with a proper U-shaped galley, a forward owner's cabin, and further sleeping accommodation aft — enough room for a family or a full crew on a longer passage. On deck, twin wheels are not fitted, but a full bimini and sun awning cover the cockpit, and the boat carries a solid inventory of ground tackle, fenders, and lines.

Sold complete with all equipment and spare parts — she's set up to be sailed away, not rebuilt.

The Yanmar RJH2E auxiliary has recently been serviced. Registration SZ20685G. Mooring available.

On the name. Ikaroa is Māori for the Milky Way — the long pathway of stars used by Polynesian navigators to find their way across open ocean. A fitting name for a boat built to go places.
